LIVESTOCK SITUATION

Los Angeles—The New Year was marked in with general rains all over the western range country. The outlook appears rather bright for a good fattening season. California's stockmen have learned that it pays to supplement dry feed in the fall, and as a result, even in the drought stricken districts, cattle and sheep are reported in fairly good shape.

Cattle prices at the opening of 1934 show very little change from a year ago, but hog prices are considerably higher. The early days of 1933 closed to choice steers at the outlet this year have been selling at $3.50 to $3.75, which is just about in line with a year ago, when the extreme January top on fed steers was $4.75. The cattle market is nearly $2 a cwt. below the early market in 1937, when choice steers sold up to $11.50 on the Los Angeles market.

The general run of range cows are now selling at $3.75 to $4.75, with some good cows up to $7 and better. This is about in line with the opening days of 1933.

No burdensome supplies of fat cattle are anticipated during January, although with the large number of cattle on feed, feeders must exercise care to see that cattle move to market in an orderly manner to assure a stable market. Undoubtedly, there is all probability that some of the cattle now reported in feedlots and on irrigated pastures may move to market in a profitable manner if conditions continue. This will be true especially if there should be any serious decline in prices.

Fed lambs are in good demand and are quoted at $8 to $8.50 for good to choice, under 60-lb. lambs. This price is slightly lower than a year ago, when the top was $9 on the Los Angeles market, is just about in line with two years ago but about $2 a cwt. lower than four years ago.

Hog prices are the lowest for January in several years, and actual hog slaughter during the first half of 1934 is expected to be the largest in a good many years. Choice butcher hogs are now selling around $7 a cwt. on the Los Angeles market, against $8.05 a year ago, $9 two years ago, $11.50 three years ago, and $10.25 four years ago.

It will be seen from the above comparisons that livestock prices are not "high" in comparison with other years, a feature which should encourage meat consumption.

ALL SHADES OF BLUE

A census taker asked the woman at the door:

"How many in your family?"

"None," snapped the answer, "no, the old man, the cow and cat."

"And the police of your family?"

"None," she answered, "the old man's a Democrat, the kid's was the party of the day, and the cat's a Republican."

CONCERT IN BOISE
