CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the bill to amend the act to prevent the importation of foreign laborers, was discussed. A resolution was introduced to investigate the Star Route frauds. The Senate then went into executive session.

In the House, the bill to prevent the importation of foreign laborers was discussed. All the amendments were voted down. The House then went into committee of the whole on the river and harbor bill.

A Rich Gift to Republicans.

Just on the eve of new primaries, going to press at the time when the "Bills Brothers" are about to show their hellish cards after a chance to show what one will be a competition. The funny part of the thing is that the "Bills factions" always "walk" the same subject that they have nothing about, and as they generally intend to wind up with a shooting scrape, they make great preparations. A friend of ours stopped us on the street the other day and told us the following, which he said came to him: He says a man called at his office and told him that he had a proposition, which also did. On the day appointed she got there, and, in a modest, shy way, she presented her subject as follows: "Sir, I have discovered that there is a real nice young lady with pretty eyes and pretty hair and pretty teeth, and pretty clothes, and she is a good Republican, and she loves me, and I love her, and we are going to get married, and I want you to give me a big, fat, juicy office, and I will give you a big, fat, juicy kiss." Our friend says he couldn't resist the proposition, and he has been looking around for a big, fat, juicy office ever since.

A Terrible Tragedy.

Just as we go to press we learn of a terrible tragedy which occurred at Fort Smith, Ark., on Thursday last. Two men, Jim Rogers and Jim Bell, had a difficulty, and Rogers shot Bell, killing him instantly. Rogers was arrested and placed in jail. Bell's friends, numbering about fifty, went to the jail, overpowered the guard, and hung Rogers to a tree. Rogers was a brother-in-law of Sheriff Hughes, and Hughes was present when the lynching occurred. He made no effort to prevent it, and says he was powerless to do so. Rogers was a desperate character, and had killed several men.

Cleveland's Opinion of Tariff.

Mr. Cooper was a cautious and prudent business man. He was always opposed to the multitude of new companies, who solicited and in every instance encouraged on her credit money for which they paid exorbitant rates of interest. Once, while talking about a matter with the latter, the latter said he would have to borrow money for six months, paying interest at the rate of three per cent. "Why do you borrow money for so short a time?" Mr. Cooper asked. "Because the bankers will not accept bills for longer." "Well, you stick," said Mr. Cooper, "I will discount your note at this rate for three years?" "Are you in earnest?" asked the would-be borrower. "Certainly I am. I will discount your note for $10,000 for three years at that rate. Will you do it?" "Of course I will," said the merchant. "Very well," said Mr. Cooper, just sign this note for $10,000, payable in three years and give me your check for $900, and the transaction is complete." "But where is the money for me?" asked the astonished merchant. "You don't get any money," was the reply. "Your interest for 36 months at three per centum per month, amounts to 108 per centum, or $10,800; therefore your check for $900 just makes us even." The force of this practical illustration of the folly of paying such an exorbitant price for the use of money was such that the merchant declared never to borrow at such ruinous rates, and he frequently used to say that nothing could have so thoroughly convinced him as this rather humorous proposal by M. Cooper.—New York Post.

A Mixed Girl's Story.

The Brainard Journal tells of a girl who came to that city from St. Paul recently and pled for exemption as a woman of evil repute, from fine appearance and command of good language attracted the special attention to all who happened to have any connection with her. She was arrested while attempting to leave the city without paying her fine (or license). The Journal continues: A few weeks ago Officer Shinnell learned of a reward being offered by a man of considerable wealth and influence in Wisconsin, living at Eau Claire, for the return of his daughter, who had disappeared. The description given of the girl tallied with that of the Minnie Leslie. The girl arrested by Officer Shinnell gave her name as Minnie Ware. At the time of her arrest at the depot, a gentleman approached the officer and told him that he recognized the girl as the missing one from Wisconsin, and would immediately telegraph her father that she no longer could be found. A telegram was received from the father in reply, stating that he would start for Brainard by the first train. The officer in charge of Minnie in St. Paul, the city from which she came to Brainard, was also telegraphed to, and replied that the girl was a confirmed thief, and had been in the penitentiary, from which she had escaped. It is also said that she is a confirmed opium fiend, and that she has been arrested in St. Paul for that offense. The father arrived in Brainard on the 3d inst., and identified the girl as his daughter. She was then taken to the county jail, and subsequently to the penitentiary at St. Paul.

Washington's Science.

Washington's science was not confined to the military art. He was a practical farmer, and was deeply interested in all that pertained to the soil. He was a member of the Agricultural Society of Fairfax county, Virginia, and was elected president of the society in 1798. He was also a member of the Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, and was elected president of that society in 1799. He was also a member of the American Philosophical Society, and was elected president of that society in 1799. He was also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and was elected president of that society in 1799. He was also a member of the American Philosophical Society, and was elected president of that society in 1799.
