THE WEISER SIGNAL.

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1905.

THE DAY HAS COMED.

Many people, if not most people, are very much interested in the Fourth of July. They remember with real pleasure its celebrations of other years, and they look forward to its coming with eagerness. All this is natural and right. The Fourth is a day of patriotism, and it is also a day of pleasure. It is a day when we may all lay aside our every-day cares and duties and enjoy ourselves in our own way. It is a day when we may all lay aside our every-day cares and duties and enjoy ourselves in our own way. It is a day when we may all lay aside our every-day cares and duties and enjoy ourselves in our own way.

They say that Time Tries All. This is true of Papers and Journals. Old ones that have been published for a number of years, and have been successful in every way, are those that have been published for a number of years, and have been successful in every way. The Signal is one of these old papers. It has been published for a number of years, and has been successful in every way. It has been published for a number of years, and has been successful in every way.

There is no use talking, when a man's right he's right. It is positively surprising to note the different people in this world, who, according to their own standards, are making a success of life. Some men are born with a silver spoon in their mouth, and some are born with a shovel in their hand. Some men are born with a silver spoon in their mouth, and some are born with a shovel in their hand.
