THE WEEKLY BUREAU

For the month of July, 1918, the Bureau has issued a special report on the progress of the war. The report shows that the Allies have made a great deal of progress, and that the Central Powers are beginning to show signs of weakness.

The Allies have captured a great deal of territory, and have destroyed a large number of the Central Powers' military resources. The Central Powers, on the other hand, have been unable to make any significant gains, and have suffered a great deal of loss of men and material.

The report also shows that the Allies have been able to maintain a high level of production, and that they are beginning to show signs of economic recovery. The Central Powers, on the other hand, have been unable to maintain their production, and are beginning to show signs of economic collapse.
