PUBLISHED AUGUST 4, 1893.

In an editorial last week on Judge Ross's decision, the expression "a learned Judge" was by mistake or inadvertence not taken literally would make Judge Ross's decision in the case against Sheriff Hailey in the late legislative contest, and in Judge Richardson of the district, wherein he belongs to the U. S. District Court.

All reasons received up to date indicate the county and success of the Cohen republicans. We wish their speedy completion and ultimate success. And when finally the blood is flood from the northern and eastern Idaho hamlets it will become a powerful and progressive commonwealth and we have become a valiant in the outer fold of Old Glory.

If every wagon road in the state was a perfect toll road, we shall every time the farmer drove anywhere to any village he would have to consider whether the trip or the privilege of driving over their every time he took a load to market. It would be of worse than to have all the storekeepers of the state owned by private parties. Fortunately most of our highways are as free as pubic property. We pay that public wantthings, maintained by taxation of the lands under them, in our locality is as silly as to assert that a public school or public court-house is unnecessary, and the latter would no doubt be criticised by one of our local exchanges were it not for its actual need.

Nothing is becoming a leading citizen and ever does will increase his popularity more than a liberal support to every enterprise calculated to warrant to make it a great success. Public spirit, manner, business, architecture, editorial or on is a distinct mark of a live man. Whenever such they are to be found in a community, it is a safe sign that it is destined and deserves to grow.
