SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1896.

Our friends in the Farmers' Friend of St. Louis do not like to be left out, so just here to weigh in.

Our big challenge in these columns remains unchallenged. Nobody seems to want to take it up. Perhaps they are afraid of getting somebody's scalp.

The Detroit News has a cartoon, under the quotation from Scripture of "Lo, a cloud arises out of the sea," showing a cloud of dollars, the silver dollar at 53 cents, the gold dollar at 100 cents. Not any.

Dollar bills just enough to illustrate—up through Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri—are by some of the agents of the coming storm. In the Nebraska district, for instance, there are thirty-seven millions of dollars, and the report does not show whether the value is based on the dollar defined either as 50 cents or the bimetallic silver dollar at 53½ cents. But any dollar says on its breast of the specimen that you have in your pocket that it contains this or that amount of metal—here for the same reason. So one may as well assume that the dollar bill says 100 cents—for the same reason that when the question of paying the debts comes up the bimetallist hangs on to the old standard dollar.

Boise, how'd like to be the Republican nominee for the governorship against the party who controls the Democratic city county and legislature? Would you be willing to be "loaded" by Democratic money and then have the Democrats step around and say, "Now, you're our candidate, and you've got to go it alone"
