

How London Celebrated the Centenary of Dickens' Birth

London celebrated the centenary of Dickens' birth with a series of events, including a grand procession and a public reading of his works.

The procession, which took place on Monday, was one of the largest ever seen in London, and was attended by thousands of people.

The public reading of Dickens' works, which took place on Tuesday, was also a great success, and was attended by a large number of people.
