Cleveland's Bratpikes May Become a Memorial Museum

It is a plan to build a memorial museum to the city's first mayor, George B. Bratpike, who died in 1887. The plan was announced by the Cleveland Historical Society, which is working to raise money for the project. The museum would be located in the city's downtown area, near the site of Bratpike's home. It would contain a collection of his personal belongings, as well as a display of his life and work. The society is currently raising money through a series of public events and a subscription drive. The estimated cost of the museum is $100,000. If the plan is approved, the museum would be dedicated to Bratpike in 1937, the centennial of his death.
