INDIO OF TODAY.
The Indian of today is a different creature from the Indian of yesterday. He is no longer the wild, untamed savage of the past. He is now a civilized man, with a mind and a heart that are as noble as those of any other race. He has learned to read and write, and he has adopted the customs and manners of the white man. He is now a citizen of the United States, and he is entitled to all the rights and privileges of citizenship. He is no longer a subject of the white man, but a free and equal member of the American people.
