DISTRICT COURT OPENED BY JUDGE ED. L. BRYAN

Burns Ordered to Penitentiary—Wild Goose Lose' Case, 3 Months' Liquor and Hogans 100 Days Each.

Washington County's District court opened this morning for the April term with Judge Ed. L. Bryan presiding.

First on the docket cared for was the case of the state of Idaho vs. "Dynamite" Burns on the charge of liquor. At the last term of the district court Burns was adjudged guilty by a jury and was ordered committed to the penitentiary for a term of from one to five years by the judge. At sentencing Burns was taken to the supreme court of the state which upheld the decision of the lower court. The latter is taken this morning was the order by the court for the execution of the order already made.

The warden of the penitentiary was informed by the officers of this county and they will be a guard sent here in the morning to escort Mr. Burns to the institution that will be his home for the next year at least.

Case No. 2 was the case of "Kid Shore Lee" Drury held to the district court on the charge of bootlegging. He pleaded guilty to this charge and was sentenced to serve six months in the county jail. This was on the first charge and there is another against him which may be pushed at the expiration of his present term at incarceration.

In the case of Rupert Bilyeu and Harry (Curley) Hogans both of whom were also held on the charge of bootlegging, the court took into consideration the time they had already lain in jail, about 45 days and sentenced them to 100 days in the county jail. The given them almost 240 days in the county jail.

The business was completed at the morning session and the court adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Profits of Cheese Making in Connection with Selling Cream.

Professor Powell, of the department of dairy manufacture of the Idaho State University, says:

The question which naturally confronts the producer of butter fat from time to time is that of marketing the product with the most possible profit. If cotton cake meal, can fat be advocated the same for all conditions. The location of the farm and many other factors must be taken into consideration.

Let us consider a case in which cheese making is compared with the selling of cream. We will suppose that the price of butter fat is 30c, 30 the last term of the district court Burns was adjudged guilty by a jury and was ordered committed to the penitentiary for a term of from one to five years by the judge. At sentencing Burns was taken to the supreme court of the state which upheld the decision of the lower court. 30 cents per pound, which is about the price paid during the summer months while the most of the butter fat is being produced, there would be considerable difference in the net possible profits in the case the cream would bring 25.25 per day. There would then be a difference of 25.75 per day.

So far as the cost of equipment required is concerned there will be very little difference. The cost of the vat and curd knives would easily be covered by the cost of the separator which would not be needed.

Another factor which affects the advisability of making cheese on the farm is the ability of the producer to make a good quality of cheese. Cheese making requires some practical, as well as scientific knowledge, in regarding milk and its products. Too much colostrum butter fat is spoiled on the farm where the producer attempts to manufacture his own dairy products without a sufficient knowledge of the cause of the trouble of manufacture. To supply such practical and scientific knowledge to those who can not take the time for a long course the Idaho Department of the University of Idaho offers a six weeks course in dairying. Information regarding this course will be gladly given to any one who may inquire for same.

Dopesters all over the country are now picking out the defects and advantages among the various big league clubs. The following is a handful of "dope" regarding the 1910 season, and is considered as good as any of the dopesters:

New York—Two-time pennant winners, with championship experience. First string catching staff for the season; pitchers, outfield, best base running club in the game, best individual batsman and baseball intellect in league.

Philadelphia—Strong batting team, but weakened pitching staff in either league; good outfield; strong catching department; fatted dependent on Wagner's return to form; speed, accuracy now material not likely to break in. Similarities hardly exist.

Chicago—A believer in machine. In addition grasps back good, but are likely position; speedy, pitching staff young and capable; reliable infield good, but ancient outfield and first base running; new material good; new and nervous manager with Napoleonic bearing over him; enthusiastic rooter.

Pittsburg—Good ball team, but lost to New York; weaker batting team of last season in the National; in process of rearrangement due to trades, but is in good hands; pitchers good; defense better than last year; new material not developed.

TOSCANINI'S DEBUT.

He Was Literally Forced to Conduct Opera the First Time.

As an opera conductor Toscanini seems loth to have achieved greatness and to have had prodigious thrust upon him. In the Century Mag Smith, giving a conductor sketch of the eminent musician, thus describes his first attempt, Toscanini was in Rio de Janeiro, doing double duty at the opera house as first cellist and assistant chorus master. One season had gone badly from the beginning. One conductor had been engaged, and another, and another, and when at length the season was half over the management was at its wits' end. In the orchestra was a substitute conductor who had obtained his place by the merest accident. He was a young man who had never conducted more than a few rehearsals, and he was not at all anxious to do so. But the management insisted, and finally he consented to conduct "Aida." He was nervous, and his nervousness communicated itself to the orchestra. Before the performance was half over the singers were in a state of mutiny. The audience began to hiss. Toscanini was literally driven from the stage. Orders to go on were given him, but he refused. He was then escorted home by the gendarmes, and there, in the seclusion of his own room, he finished the performance. That night, they said, he slept as he had never slept before. The following morning he received a message from the management asking him to conduct the performance of "Aida" that night. He refused. He was then threatened with imprisonment if he did not obey. Again he refused. Finally, however, he was induced to go to the opera house, and there, in the presence of the angry audience, he conducted the performance of "Aida" from beginning to end. The audience, however, was not angry at all. It was delighted. Toscanini had found himself.

HENRY'S ORATORY.

Center led his forces, Charles X led Clermont, and George III. ("Prendo!" cried the speaker), may yeah by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it.

I am not a Virginian, but an American.

I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know no way of judging of the future but by the past.

In life as dear or peace as sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but, as for me, give me liberty or give me death!—Patrick Henry.

FOR ANOTHER TWO YEARS.

The city election is a thing of the past, and in accordance with the wishes of a majority of the voters the same mayor and council will serve the people for the next two years. The testimonial of approval given the administration was gratifying indeed and is evidence that the people of Weiser are not unmindful of what the servants have proven true to their promises and have safeguarded the interests of their constituents.

While the contest was spirited, practically in all feeling was manifested and the day passed without a fight, to use the even tenor of affairs. In the main the candidates themselves are responsible for the general good feeling as they remained the worth of their opponents and refused to resort to unseemly scramble for the jobs.

Now that the result is known the Signal believes there is much greater satisfaction than is usually manifested after an election. The opposition to the mayor and councilmen was not based on merits in their own acts as the acts of some of the subordinate officials whose duties it is to carry into execution the mandates of the council. In some instances proper consideration has not been given the feelings of the people with whom the city employes have come in contact and the answer and contribute suffered yesterday as a result. It is more gratifying to know they were not successful, and the Signal believes there will not be cause for many of the same kind in the future.

We now have two years ahead of us in which to round out and complete the monumental tasks on hand, and it is the hope of this paper that these will continue to be the same good feeling between the officials and the people which has characterized

Jim Figures Out Currency.

Congressman Gamer: The editors over the Boise Capital News on the appropriations made by the late deceased legislature, should do a little investigating into the truthfulness of the figures given, unless they, like the capital news, desire to deceive their readers. The real facts should be all sufficient without the Capital News magnifying glasses to read them through. The State and Idaho county tax twenty-five mills equalization for the "Tenth Judicial District," and the $6,300 for the "Blue Creek wagon road," which were made at among the other appropriations, are a hoax, likewise the $10,000 for the "Fifth Judicial District," to the south portion of the state, and no doubt, there are others. The country editors should not let their desire to "make things look bad," get entirely away with their truthfulness—the Capital News, or reason it wrongly before us in its issue, that of lying and blackmailing.

The One Universal Language.

I sometimes think that the greatest educational force in the world today is the film camera. The picture speaks a universal language that tells more at a single glance than the sentences together could put on paper or utter. The picture writing of the nine tribes is the oldest known means of recording facts. It survives the Chinese alphabet, every character in which represents a distinct idea, a concentrated picture—the character meaning "danger," for example, representing a girl standing on the edge of a cliff. But while few foreigners can master the intricate symbols of Chinese writing, any Chinaman intelligent enough to "savvy the button," can write with his cuckoo a story that everyone in the world can read. And the untold millions of pictographs made literally from pole to pole, have done more, I believe, to educate the people of the present generation and broaden their mental horizons than any other one modern device. Few people can write a description of a ship's machine, a mechanical phenomenon or a strange custom so completely, compactly and yet colorfully that everyone who reads will see the thing described in the author's mind. But a picture can draw a picture that will come into where text even typing it cannot impression. Into the hundreds of retail and industry conventions of Charles Scribner's Monthly, in every part of the world, and in descriptions that much resemble the dictionary that are now ready at the processes of interpretation with the camera in the early nineteen hundreds. Irving Hale, Jr. Scribner's in the April Delineator.

Wages of Farm Labor.

Hand Bulletin: A recent bulletin issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, on the wages of farm labor of the United States increased about three and two-thirds per cent during the year 1910, and about one and one-half in the past two years. Since 1902 the increase has been about thirty-four per cent.

The wages of farm labor had an upward tendency during the decade of the seventies (considered on gold basis); they were almost stationary during the eighties, and declined from 1892 to 1894, after which year they fell, been steadily tending upward. When wages compared with the average of wages during the eighties, are about fifty-three per cent higher, and when compared with the year of 1894 wages now are about sixty-five per cent higher.

The current average rate of farm wages in the United States, when board is included, is, by the month, $26.81; by the day, other than harvest, $1.11; at harvest, $1.55. When board is not included the rate is, by the month, $29.38; by the day, other than harvest, $1.47; by the day, at harvest, $1.87.

The same authority shows that wages vary widely in different parts of the United States. Some figures for the year 1910 are as follows: North Dakota, $40.31; Nevada, $39.97; Arizona, $39.81; Montana, $39.16; Wyoming, $38.62; Idaho, $34.65. These are the widest extremes. All the northwest pay high wages and the fact is made plain that the farmer as well as the railroad companies and other corporations have to help meet the present increased cost of living by paying more to the people who work
