THE WEISER DAILY SIGNAL

WEISER, WASHINGTON COUNTY, IDAHO, MONDAY, JULY 15, 1912

Pioneer Homesteader.

Irrigation Project Across Snake River in Oregon Gradually Nearing Completion.

The new irrigation project of the Snake River Irrigation District across the river in Oregon, is rapidly nearing completion. On each proposition under the Owyhee Irrigation Co., Weiser contractors.

At present only a small force is also with teams and scrapers is employed in completing the ditches, of which there will be fifty-seven miles all told, which will be built about three miles each of town, it is planned to begin work on the plant in about two weeks, at which time it is thought all the ditch work will be nearly completed.

Bernard O'Toole, who is in charge of operations at present, will have in a few days for Baxter, taking with him "Jim-Lin," the firm's steam shovel. Then Mr. O'Toole's force will expend a week or two with scrapers on contract in that town.

Home.

We are all familiar with the saying, "Home is where the heart is." There are families who have moved a resident members in which is doubtful that there is no real home life; the sympathetic interest in one another's pleasures and occupations is absent, either besides, each being absorbed in his own selfish pleasures and occupations. The house does not make the home. But, those who thoughtfully we can best serve God and our fellow men by making the most of the home life. Home is the foundation of all other societies, and consequently more or less, unsatisfactory. The home is the foundation of all other societies, and consequently more or less, unsatisfactory. The home is the foundation of all other societies, and consequently more or less, unsatisfactory. The

THE DAILY SIGNAL.

Published Every Day Except Sunday By The SIGNAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, 146 Main St., Cor. Hall

L. J. PURSELL, Manager.

Member Western Press Assn.
C. A. Smithee, Manager Editorial Dept.
F. S. Burroughs, Cashier, Bus. Dept.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

1 week ..... $ .15
1 month ..... .60
3 months (by carrier) 1.65
6 months (by carrier) 3.25
1 year (by mail) 5.00

Entered at the postoffice at Weiser, Idaho, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For County Attorney.

Editor Signal: Please announce through the columns of your paper that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for county attorney, subject to the will of the voters at the primaries to be held July 28th.

JOHN H. NORRIS.

I hereby announce my candidacy for nomination on the Republican ticket for the office of representing eighteenth district of Washington-county, subject to the will of the voters at the primary election to be held July 28th.

J. L. RICHLANDS.

For Sheriff.

To the voters of Washington county, Idaho:

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination for sheriff subject to the will of the Republican voters at the coming primary election. I pledge myself to faithful and economical administration of said office if I am nominated and elected.

WILLIAM H. WARCHE.

Dated July 1, 1912.

For Sheriff.

Editor Signal: Please announce that I am a candidate for sheriff of Washington county, subject to the wishes of the Republican voters at the primary.

J. M. DUNN.

For County Assessor.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of county assessor, subject to the will of the Republican voters at the primaries to be held July 28th.

JOHN J. McCRIA.

Without Interference.

Various agricultural and financial publications throughout the country are decrying the value of the venture because they are promising impossible returns, suggests the Commercial Advertiser. The promises are of a sort that do not bind the promoter—they are not a bond by a long shot, it seems from a general perusal of the articles in question. Behind that the planning of great activity, poor and green orchards is going on in every section of the country, from Massachusetts to Florida, from New York to the Pacific, up and down the coast and thence out again to the Atlantic.

In not instance as extensive as Connecticut shows to be the case. But profits or well over 200 per cent are made from apple orchards which he is planting in the Northwest State—orchards which he offers for $500 per acre, to be delivered without further expense when they come into bearing—in six years. "The returns the seventh year," he declares, "will undoubtedly pay the first loan and 100 per cent on the investment." Just as wild statements are made about orchards in Missouri, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Wisconsin, Maryland, Michigan, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Virginia, in fact almost every state in the Union. Not "some land in the world."

No doubt immense sums are being invested in those lands, as in the case of the first principles, of fruit growing, and the users will go on for several years yet. It will go on until a few hundred believe take place and a few hundred prosperous men the country or send to jail.

Land advertising would profess that orchards literature promises profits of several hundred per cent in a banking or commercial enterprise would find few takers, because such ventures are on a rule conducted along conservative lines; so many of the same persons who would turn down such offers half an orchard bonds because the business-like as yet out of normal normal conditions.

The money the boom drums out of the illegitimate speculations the lot, for it will be for the honest promoters and landowners and the communities where they reside. This is particularly true of the forested fruit sections of the northwest. We have much to gain by honest promotion, much to lose by dishonest methods.—Oregonian.

Not Supporting Bonds.

Lest it might be believed by those who do not know differently, the Recorder must deny that it is supporting "Bonds and Smith the school-pals" as announced by the Democratic Weiser Times. It is supporting French and Smith, as it has for years, on its merits as candidates for two years, on its record for enthusiastic industry, honesty and liberal service to the state, and it is very desirous that the honesty only moderate proportion of Republican conventional candidates from Idaho, Fala, Should either of the Recorder's good friends, the school-pal, along any notable Shoshone, Bonds, Smith, Democratic candidates, a place on the ticket, the Recorder would gladly help elect them, but we have you know that the Recorder is and always was for French and Smith, and that it will file the progressive banner without apology.—Enserted Recorder.

OLD ENGLISH EXECUTIONS.

Breakfast For the Guests Invited to See the Hanging.

Executions, when criminals were banged in the Old Bailey in London, were quite a ceremony enough. The governor of Newgate, for instance, always gave a breakfast to those friends he had invited to see the hanging, and by established custom invited fellows always formed the principal dish, although, as John Gladstone had related, mostly every one was entitled to invite a friend or friends.

Another function described is "Lion dust in the Mirror" was the reception held afterward by the inmates of the Grape Tregon, in Fleet street, where he had refreshment with his associates and sold the fatal rope at the rate of a shilling per inch.

The good old times nearly grace, however, when the criminal confessed with a confession and "last dying speech," which was printed there and then. According to Cuss and Crimson, there were printed in Shrewsbury Mr Chinnock of Seven Dials. And another criminal executed was received on his way to Tyburn and had the pleasure, like Lord Broughton, of reading the next day's obituary notice.

Many of these broadsides, printed on the execution eveller "brown paper" can still be obtained in the antiquarian book shops—but seem to have defied either time and the "brown paper one." Yet one was shot in the windows of Seven Dials, Lambeth, forgotten, under which appeared the words:

"Behold this dreadful spectacle and see
The end of wicked lustful sinners be."

An execution which never came off was that of Edward Daniel, the publisher, who was in 1726 was arraigned before the court of King's bench in Guildhall for treason in the rebellion of 1715. He was reprieved and received the fortune teller put on his trial.

An Irish Duel.

John Keane, a county judge, and Roger Bernal, member of the privy council, participated in an affair of honor in the Phoenix park some years ago. The grounds of that house, which is now the property of the state, were then the favorite dueling ground of the Irish gentry. Keane and Bernal had quarreled over a question of politics, and the latter had challenged the judge. Keane was a noted shot, and Bernal, who was a novice with the pistol, was no match for him. Keane fired in the air, but Bernal's bullet struck him in the leg, inflicting a severe wound. Keane was carried off the field, and Bernal, who was arrested, was released on bail.

Making Cheese in Olden Days.

Cheese is made by the old time farmers in the summer and fall, and they also do it when four cents cow is worth $50. Cheese was formerly manufactured entirely at home, and was also made from apple orchards, which he is planting in the Northwest State—orchards which he offers for $500 per acre, to be delivered without further expense when they come into bearing—in six years. "The returns the seventh year," he declares, "will undoubtedly pay the first loan and 100 per cent on the investment." Just as wild statements are made about orchards in Missouri, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Wisconsin, Maryland, Michigan, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Virginia, in fact almost every state in the Union. Not "some land in the world."

No doubt immense sums are being invested in those lands, as in the case of the first principles, of fruit growing, and the users will go on for several years yet. It will go on until a few hundred believe take place and a few hundred prosperous men the country or send to jail.

Land advertising would profess that orchards literature promises profits of several hundred per cent in a banking or commercial enterprise would find few takers, because such ventures are on a rule conducted along conservative lines; so many of the same persons who would turn down such offers half an orchard bonds because the business-like as yet out of normal normal conditions.

The money the boom drums out of the illegitimate speculations the lot, for it will be for the honest promoters and landowners and the communities where they reside. This is particularly true of the forested fruit sections of the northwest. We have much to gain by honest promotion, much to lose by dishonest methods.—Oregonian.

An Open Letter to the Public

THE buying public has a distinct interest whether or not chant advertises. It is to your interest, Mrs. Consumer, whether or not your merchant tells you by advertisement of his wares [illegible] an economic truth that only the merchant who advertises can afford to make price concessions that are really competitive, to do business on the smallest per sale profit.

The merchant who does not advertise is necessarily content with small sales, therefore must make a large per sale profit.

Again—the very fact that your merchant advertises is a guarantee that his goods are moving every day, therefore you are assured of good goods and fresh goods. No merchant can afford to advertise for your inspection, stale or shoddy goods. Your pocketbook, your satisfaction, your every interest demands that your merchant be a good advertiser.

SPARE TIME TO LAUGH.

Breeding Over Your "Worries Won't Lighten the Burden.

It is the duty of sensible men to depressing circumstances to storm to be cheerful. In the general belief that if a man is not naturally light hearted he cannot make himself so.

Yet this is far from being the case, and there is many a man who is a pessimist despite himself. In the reference to the [illegible] of Edward III. the [illegible] of Edward III. the [illegible] of Edward III.