[illegible] News From Chicago Authority Shows New Mail on March and South Main and Ida[illegible]

For the past several years there has been a movement among the people of a railroad connecting the north and south Main and had practically the support of surveys were steadily supported by some railroad company in the country south of Grangeville as well as along the Salmon river substantial than would be from Sum-a City to Lewiston, says the Grangeville Free Press. A number of preliminary surveys have been made through the country and a very forward to report Clerk, but there is of the most representative gentlemen [illegible] secretaries were found from point to point where [illegible] the lines. Salmon City, the present terminal of the Pacific & Idaho Northern railroad, is [illegible] to Lewiston, with a survey for a branch line to Grangeville. Later to [illegible] Weiser, with a survey for a line to Grangeville, Idaho, to New Meadows, Idaho, as stated to have been let on July 30. Contracts for grading from Weiser, Idaho, to Klamath, Oregon, just east of the Oregon mountains and north of the California state line, are now, it is [illegible] stated, it is said, New Meadows, Idaho, is the terminus of the Pacific & Idaho Northern R. R. and this road will be used by the Hill system as a link in the new line.

Not so Poor.

Under the usual cursory method of reading of the latest official figures the white people of Mississippi, in view of the beginning of the year's tax bills, appear to the state rather as a poor people.

Of course, there are individuals in the world who possess more than that, but it is a respectable sum nevertheless. It is not so bad either when protested among all the people of the state. Maybe has a total population of 328,000. Dividing the $450,000,000 equally gives an average fortune of $1,500 for every woman, man and child in the state.

It may be said that this is a poor state, and that the people have little to pay taxes with; only 30 years old as a state. Her resources have been hardly touched. The mineral and agricultural wealth has been barely scratched on the surface.

Compare Idaho with some of the other states, or with "poorer" states that have been blessed beyond measure, "if the statistics are to be believed." Maybe we better scientist with [illegible]

[illegible] Property Value Per Capita.

[illegible]	$ 165,664,000	$ 1,000

[illegible]	160,000,000	1,000
[illegible]	300,000,000	1,000

[illegible] to notice from these figures that citizens of Maine have an average of $1,000; those of California $1461; those of Kansas $1500; those of New Hampshire $1000, while those of South Dakota $1191.

When Idaho can make such a showing in comparison with Maine, as regards development and resources, we will be content. The world over for her richness, liberty, is little ground for complaint.

Nature has done a noble work in this land; that humanity has not yet seen here for the object, the farmer, the fruit raiser, the lumberman, the investor and all the others who plan important parts in the development of a country, can well be assured that the showing made at the early date is most gratifying.

There is one other phase of the situation locally that [illegible] for consideration. The average wealth of the Idaho citizen is $1400, and less. Broadcast at this day is reported to be worth over five millions and a half. In his day he could not vote for $500, count his cattle and place them all on small footing with the average citizen in point of wealth. [illegible] Broadcast could vote, and exercise much influence in the state, while he was worth $500 less and give such one of them at least $1400.

If Mr. Broadcast thinks he would be belonging in more favorable light to take for the shrewd sons in the community to get possession of the [illegible] Summit and Valley "Ike" [illegible] just as poor as they were in the Dire Blues.

Perhaps no one has suggested to Mr. Broadcast this plan of disposing of his wealth. It might appeal to him. It would certainly give him fame. It would cause him and his contentment to be discussed in and around the public clubs. It might [illegible] one of the fundraising journals of Socialism—the equal distribution of wealth. It would also test the ability of the money-mongering of the state ability to determine whether or not they had their curiosity. It would be an interesting experiment in socialism, whatever its value in other respects.—Boise Statesman.
