The Manager Of the B. Q. A.

By VAUGHAN KESTER

CHAPTER VII.

D. B. HARRIS and his wife were sitting at the breakfast table in the morning. The young man was looking at the newspaper which lay on the table. "What a fine article," he said, "the one about the B. Q. A. manager. It says that he is a real character."

"Yes, it is," said Mrs. Harris. "I have read it over and over again. It is so interesting."

"I suppose you are going to read it again," said Harris.

"I have already done so," said Mrs. Harris. "It is so good."

"Well, you may be right," said Harris. "But I don't know what the B. Q. A. is all about. It seems to be a very important organization."

"It is," said Mrs. Harris. "It is the largest and most influential organization in the city."

"I suppose you are a member of it?" said Harris.

"I am," said Mrs. Harris. "I have been a member for several years."

"How do you like it?" said Harris.

"I like it very much," said Mrs. Harris. "It is a very interesting and profitable organization."

"I suppose you get a good deal of money out of it?" said Harris.

"I do," said Mrs. Harris. "I have made a very good thing out of it."

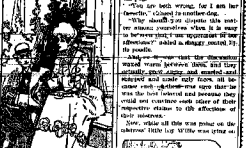

"I suppose you are going to continue to be a member of it?" said Harris.

"I am," said Mrs. Harris. "I have no intention of leaving it."

"I suppose you are going to continue to get a good deal of money out of it?" said Harris.

"I am," said Mrs. Harris. "I have no intention of stopping."

The Deceived Dogs

"The man in the top hat," said the dog, "is a very cunning fellow. He has deceived many of us dogs."

"I know," said the other dog. "He has deceived me too. He has made me believe that he was a good fellow, but he is really a bad fellow."

"I have seen him many times," said the first dog. "He is always in the city, and he always has a lot of money."

"I have seen him too," said the second dog. "He is always in the city, and he always has a lot of money."

"I have seen him too," said the third dog. "He is always in the city, and he always has a lot of money."

"I have seen him too," said the fourth dog. "He is always in the city, and he always has a lot of money."

"I have seen him too," said the fifth dog. "He is always in the city, and he always has a lot of money."
