Raffles, The Amateur Cracksman

By W. W. HOBBS

LE PREMIER PAS
No. 3 of the Series

It was a hot day in London, and the sun was shining brightly on the streets. The people were going about their business, some in a hurry, some in a leisurely way. In the heart of the city, there was a small, quiet street. In one of the houses on this street, there was a man who was known to the police as 'The Amateur Cracksman'.

He was a man of middle age, with a high forehead and a serious expression. He was dressed in a simple, dark suit. He was sitting at a table in a small, dimly lit room, looking out of a window at the street below.

He was a man of many talents. He was a skilled craftsman, a talented musician, and a brilliant strategist. He was also a man of great courage and determination. He had spent many years of his life in the shadows, and he was now ready to reveal his secrets to the world.
